To All Ventura College Foundation Marketplace Vendors,

We wanted to provide you with an update regarding the Ventura College Foundation's Weekend Marketplace and recent COVID-19 exposure. We have learned that another Marketplace employee has tested positive for the virus. The contact tracing investigation determined that although the individual worked in the public areas of the Marketplace when we were last open on December 26, and 27, 2020, this individual remained socially distanced (6 feet or more away) from vendors, non-office staff and the public throughout their shifts. This employee was wearing a face covering at all times during their shifts. The affected employee is currently self-quarantining for 14 days and will be retested next week.

The Ventura College Foundation is committed to a keeping the Marketplace safe for staff, vendors and the public. Employees are constantly monitored to ensure they are wearing face coverings and adhere to social distancing rules. They must undergo temperatures checks and be symptom free before starting their shifts. All Marketplace employees who are infected or who have been in contact with an affected staff member are required to self-quarantine, must receive two negative test results taken one week apart, and be completely symptom free for three days or more before returning to work.

The Marketplace is currently scheduled to reopen on January 16-17, 2021.

We understand how difficult these past few months have been for you. We continue to work with you and all Marketplace staff to follow and support public health and safety protocols.

We will notify vendors of any updates by email, the Marketplace Facebook page, (<https://www.facebook.com/vcfmarketplace/>), the Marketplace website (<https://venturacollegefoundation.org/weekend-marketplace/>), text messages and/or through our telephone answering voicemail system.

Sincerely,

Anne Paul King,
Executive Director
Ventura College Foundation
